Burns' Heave Gives Tigers Only Run of Game.

Californian Pitches Another Great Game, Performing Better Than Siever, but Has Himself to Blame Payne Crosses Plate When Burns Throws to the Bleacher Fence.

In a desperate effort to retire a runner at first base on a perfect bunt in the third Inning, Bill Burns threw into right field, allowing Detroit to make the only run of the final game of the series with the

If ever a pitcher deserved sympathy, it an error. Score: was Burns yesterday. While there have been many pitcher's battles at National Park this season, the big southpaw eclipsed all the previous performances yesterday when he outpitched the cunning Siever and held the champions down to one clean single.

Detroit is given three hits, but two of These were scratch infield blows, and one of them came mighty near being an error, and was only allowed as a hit because it was questionable if the fielder could have recovered in time to throw even had the ball been handled cleanly. The other infield hit was the bunt which resulted so disastrously for the Nationals. Control Was Perfect.

Burns' control was absolutely perfect Credited with seven strike-outs, Burns did not allow a single base on balls dur ing the nine innings, and his support was of such order that had he not thrown the ball away the game would have gone into extra innings. It was indeed a bitter blow for the Californian, but there is considerable consolation in the fact that Burns' exhibition yesterday removed any doubt as to the pitcher being a fixture in fast compay. He was unhittable for seven innings, and combined speed and curves in such clever fashion that in all but two rounds the Tigers went down in

While considerably below the standard set by Burns, Siever pitched good ball. In each of the first four sessions Washington got runners on the bases, but each time Siever was equal to the occasion and retired the side without being scored upon. In the ninth with one out he gave the only base on balls of the game, but disposed of the next two batters and left the field a winner. He will travel a long way without being fortunate enough to land another victory under the same

Milan Reaches Third.

A single, a sacrifice, and an out put Milan on third in the first, but he was left. In the second, with two out, a single by McBride was wasted, and in the third Ganley doubled, but got no farther, Street's liner in the fourth was booted by Schaefer, but a double play sent the Nationals into the field with blanks From then on to the ninth the Nationals went out in order, but in the last round Ganley drew a base on balls. Infield flies by Delehanty and Clymer ended the last place.

To Gotham fans the work of the Giants has been painful. The team has not lived up to the hopes that early form justified, and, to make matters worse, Mathewson McGraw's star pitcher, has hit the toboggan, at least temporarily. It makes a great difference to any team when a mainstay like Matty goes wrong. It takes a lot of courage out of the boys. Style, quality, and price.

Those are the three important factors in clothing selling nowadays. And another, equally important, is fit. Parker-Bridget Clothing represents, as everybody knows, the standards of correct style, high quality, and perfect fit. And fairest prices have always stood as the very bulwark of the Parker-Bridget business.
